

System Dynamics R&D Series 2021 Systemic Supervision

Access Leadership is pleased to bring you a series of 10 x two-hour group systemic supervision sessions for 2021. The sessions are co-developed and facilitated by Karen Tweedie MCC of KT Consulting and Dean Mason of Leading Well and run from February to November.

This is a professional development series for leaders, coaches, and mentors. It is an opportunity to stop and zoom out, to reflect on how we do what we do in service of our clients. Each session enables several participants to share a current client challenge or opportunity and, with the support of respected colleagues, to 'let the light in' to ensure we stay aligned with the difference we're wanting to make in the world.

In this series participants will experience a safe, confidential and non-threatening approach to reflecting on professional practice that both resources them and expands their insight. Expertly held by Karen and Dean, in their sixth year of running similar workshop series, the systemic orientation will guide both our approach and our learning. This year every third workshop will incorporate additional learning opportunities for exploring personal and professional dimensions to being a practitioner of systemic work.

If you have any queries and or considerations to the suitability of these workshops to contribute to your work, please make contact with Karen (karen@kct.coach) or Dean (dean@leadingwellgroup.com.au), otherwise, please click on the register button below.

About System Dynamics

The field of System Dynamics comprises a set of five organising principles that support healthy organisational functioning. The application of Systemic Principles in leadership situations enables leaders and those who support them to identify the multiple forces at play, make clear decisions and approach change initiatives within any organisational system with the most holistic and inclusive view

The series will be co-facilitated by Karen Tweedie of KT Consulting and Dean Mason of Leading Well

Karen Tweedie MCC is an internationally recognised executive coach and former President of the International Coach Federation (ICF). Karen's unique approach to coaching is informed by the systemic mindset, seeing an individual in terms of the broader systems they inhabit. Karen uses the mapping process to gain insight into an existing client system, to reveal the hidden dynamics at play, to bring to light new perspectives and possibilities, to test approaches and to re-focus efforts to bring about desired results.

Dean Mason is a senior business leadership adviser with over 30 years' experience across many Australian industries, some that have boomed (ICT) and others that have undergone major transition, especially in manufacturing. Combined with his front-line experience of guiding organisations and individuals through complex change, Dean has trained extensively in systemic constellation work, mindfulness, martial arts and various coaching methodologies to inform the facilitation expertise he brings to this workshop.
